

You want to be sure your new home improvement complies with building regulations.

And so does the government...

Assure
Certification

7634

That's why every window and door installation or replacement in England and Wales must now be registered, reaching the standards set by the government's building regulations. If you were to have work carried out that did not comply with building regulations, the installation would not be legal and could cause significant problems when you come to sell your home.

How does Assure benefit you?

When it comes to improving your home with new windows and doors, it can be a daunting task to find a company that you can trust. Choosing an Assure-certified installer to complete the work means you can rest assured that the installation complies with Building Regulations and is therefore legal and correct. You will even be sent a certificate to prove it. This should arrive within 28 days and proves that the work is registered with the local authority.

When you choose an Assure-certified company, homeowners are assured that...

- Your installation complies with Building Regulations.
- Windows and doors are the energy rated ones you ordered.
- All installers and surveyors hold appropriate qualifications and are regularly audited to ensure that they are up to date with the latest regulations and have undertaken CPD (Continual Professional Development).
- Your installation is covered by an insurance backed guarantee.
- A sample selection of installations of every certified installer is independently audited by Assure to ensure regulations are being upheld.
